Federal Research Funding and the Fiscal Cliff

Mike Purdy, Executive Vice President for Research

Loftin Flowers, Assistant Vice President for Government Relations

December 13, 2012
Toward the “fiscal cliff”

- August, 2011: Budget Control Act (BCA) is passed
  - Bi-partisan deal to raise the debt ceiling creates “Super-Committee” to reduce deficit and enact budgetary reforms.
  - Budget “Sequestration” conceived of as a tool to incentivize a deal.

- November, 2011: Super-Committee fails
  - Under Budget Control Act, Sequestration is now law of the land, scheduled to take effect in 2013.
  - $1.2 trillion in automatic, across-the-board cuts (additional to BCA) to discretionary spending, split evenly between defense and non-defense.

- November, 2012: “Status-Quo Election”

- November-December, 2012: Lame Duck Session
  - Ongoing negotiations among House, Senate, White House toward a deal that would set new spending and revenue targets and, presumably, avert or delay Sequestration.
2013 and Beyond

• January, 2013: The “Fiscal Cliff”
  – Sequestration hits January 2, unless new legislation is enacted to avert it
  – Expiration of lower marginal tax rates (Bush tax cuts)
  – Payroll Tax Holiday
  – Unemployment Benefits
  – Alternative Minimum Tax Patch
  – Medicare “Doc Fix”
  – Debt Ceiling (?)

• March, 2013: Expiration of current “Continuing Resolution” (CR)
  – Enacted Sept., 2012; CR funds government at BCA levels (+ 0.6%) for next 6 months (through March 27, 2013).
  – No Appropriations Bills out of current Congress.

Priorities

• Planning (coordinated centrally) with the schools to build awareness and establish a set of budget options, available to be implemented as reductions take effect

• Monitor the developing situation in D.C. so we are forewarned concerning possible outcomes

• Cooperate with sister institutions to advocate for a resolution to the budget stalemate and emphasize the priority of university-based research and its importance to the long-term economic health of the nation

• Maintain good internal communications within Columbia, to keep faculty and administrators well-informed of the possible outcomes
