At Harvard, the student body is predominantly the program in law, science, and medicine. The Senate and the House of Representatives have approved the creation of a university senate, with students and administrators serving on it. The senate will have 101 members, including 30 senators, 30 representatives, and 41 administrators. The senate will be the primary body of the university, with the power to review the policies and procedures of the university. The Senate has the authority to enact new legislation and to rescind old laws. The Senate will meet twice a week, with a single quorum of 70 votes required for passage of a bill. The Senate will have a majority of students and a minority of administrators. The Senate will be elected by the students, with the exception of the 41 administrators, who are appointed by the president of the university. The Senate will meet in chambers between May 20 and May 21.
